Conference Presentation

The purpose of this conference is to raise public awareness regarding the urgent need to address our regional transportation needs and new technological and operational possibilities since the adoption of the 2002 Regional Rail Plan.

The Regional Rail Plan, while proposing much-needed infrastructure, has not received the funding or the attention necessary to make it an operational reality, and the role of the state and local governments in funding and executing the plan has not been clearly defined. However, the need for expanded, continuing, and reliable participation by the state and local governments for a regional system has become even more acute, given the diminishing per-capita federal share of funds that are available to meet the region's needs.

Fortunately, there are many examples in North America and elsewhere where regional transportation plans have been successfully implemented. There are regions that are demonstrating, through cooperative governance structures, sound management techniques, and evolving technologies that it is possible to provide a reliable transportation system for the movement of goods and people that is not solely dependent on cars and trucks.

The symposium will offer representatives from around the Baltimore region an opportunity to take a thorough look at our transportation strengths and weaknesses.
